

SEWB training and development calendar

As at Thursday, 6 February 2020

This report has been developed for those working in the South Australian Social Emotional Wellbeing sector.

This report is a selective compilation of mainly non-accredited training courses that are being offered by various training providers. Courses are presented under various categories (listed below) to assist in selection. NB: courses with a start date of 31 December means that it is available at any time or that the start time can be negotiated.

It is expected that this report be considered at the time of Training Needs Analyses and/or Performance and Development appraisals being conducted for each SEWB worker, although it need not be referred to only at this time.

With each short non-accredited course, the course subject has been aligned to HLT40113 Certificate IV in Aboriginal Torres Strait Islander Primary Health Care units of competency as a way of demonstrating their relevance to the SEWB workforce.

At this point in time, courses are organised and presented under the following categories:

- AOD
- Business
- Case management
- Clinical
- Communication
- Community Development
- Computer skills
- Counselling
- Financial Management
- Mental health
- Operations, Administration and Organisation
- Personal Skills
- Social health
- Work health safety

Provider Aboriginal Drug & Alcohol Council (ADAC)

Course: National Indigenous Drug & Alcohol Conference 2020ID: 1574

About: A one-day pre-conference workshop at the Stamford Plaza, followed by a 3-day conference at the Adelaide Convention Centre.
The theme of this Conference, 'Pathways to Healing', acknowledges the great importance placed on healing by Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples and the role that it plays in addressing harmful alcohol and other drug use.

Healing is a complex issue meaning different things to different people. It can take place at different levels, from a body, mind and spirit and/or individual, family and community level. NIDAC20 seeks to explore these complexities and meanings as they relate to addressing harmful alcohol and other drug use.

Provider Australian Childhood Foundation

Course: Moving and soothing

ID: 1492

About: Increasingly, there is an understanding that talk-based interventions on their own do not address all the needs of children and young people who have experienced trauma or entrenched adversity. The residue of such toxic stress remains in the body and brain of each child and young person. Those who support these children need a range of strategies to promote repair and healing. Body based interventions that are child focused provide opportunities for practitioners in multiple settings to support children and young people to engage with their own physiological responses and change these to enable a felt sense of safety and trust. It will offer individual, family and group work approaches for delivering this modality of therapeutic intervention. The workshop draws from the knowledge base associated with sensorimotor psychotherapy, dance and movement forms of intervention, and play based modalities.

About: This full-day interactive professional development training alerts leaders and managers to the benefits of embedding trauma-informed principles throughout their programs, systems and organisations, and provides the framework and steps to undertake the process. Informed by current research, it highlights the reality that many clients and staff have experiences of past and present trauma/s, putting them at high risk of retraumatisation, including in organisations over time. These experiences often profoundly affect staff and client health, wellbeing and ability to optimally interact, function, and engage.

Course: Depression Dilemmas

ID: 1548

About: Despite improved awareness and education, there are still some presentations of depression that are highly challenging for clinicians to manage in the primary care setting. Depression Dilemmas is a new interactive workshop that tackles areas of treating mood disorders that clinicians can find particularly demanding. Using case studies as the platform for learning, the program explores strategies to tackle depression in the context of alcohol use disorder, late life depression and depression that is failing to remit despite seemingly adequate treatment. Open to both general practitioners and psychologists, this advanced workshop also provides an opportunity for the two professions to interact, share each other's perspective and problem solve together.

Course: Foundation for Trauma-Informed Care and Practice (Level 1) ID: 1215

About: This one-day interactive training builds awareness to the possibility that clients, staff members and/or practitioners may have experiences of trauma, from childhood or more recently. It highlights how the trauma may be affecting their health, wellbeing, daily interactions and functioning. By participating in this professional development training, attendees will:

- Utilise knowledge of the types, prevalence and impacts of trauma to articulate the benefits of trauma-informed services;
- Analyse the stress response to better understand your clients' challenges in regulating their emotions and arousal;
- Use a trauma-informed lens to reframe challenging emotions and behaviours as 'adaptive' responses to trauma;
- Apply the principles of trauma-informed practice to develop strategies which enhance safety, minimise re-traumatisation and support recovery;
- Perform an individual/organisational practice audit.

Material presented in the training will draw on research including from Blue Knot Foundation's Practice Guidelines for Treatment of Complex Trauma and Trauma Informed Care and Service Delivery www.blueknot.org.au/guidelines and other relevant research.

Course: Motivational Interviewing

ID: 485

About: Suitable for all mental health clinicians. This workshop is designed for mental health practitioners working in Public Mental Health Services. Motivation is the reason why people do the things they do. Motivational interviewing is a counselling approach based on the principle that all human behaviour is motivated. It acknowledges that many people experience ambivalence when deciding to make changes – they both want and don't want to change. It also acknowledges that people can perceive both the advantages and disadvantages of changing, or continuing, with their current behaviour. The aim is not to immediately focus on the action of changing, but working to enhance motivation to change.

Course: Solution Focussed (Brief) Therapy ID: 1562

About: This workshop is aimed at clinicians with little or no previous knowledge of Solution Focussed (Brief) Therapy. SFBT comprises a goal-directed collaborative approach to psychotherapeutic change that is conducted through direct observation of clients' responses to a series of constructed question formats. SFBT may be used when a less confronting therapeutic may be required rather than using traditional Cognitive Behavioural or Interpersonal Therapies. SFBT is supporting clients to identify and attend to their own internal competencies, skills and resources; as well as their immediate support systems and supportive social networks.

Provider Akolade Pty Ltd

Course: 2nd National Indigenous Housing and Homelessness Forum

ID: 1536

About: There is a massive over-representation of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people experiencing homelessness and a major lack of affordable housing. The Australian Government and communities have a very important role to play in ending homelessness. Homelessness requires national attention and consideration from governments and communities around Australia. The 2nd National Indigenous Housing & Homelessness Forum will examine how to improve housing issues for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people. The Forum will also examine the lack of cultural understanding in the housing sector and how collaboration is crucial in order to have better outcomes.

Course: SA Marte Meo

ID: 1537

About: The Marte Meo Program was developed by Maria Aarts in the late 1970's in the Netherlands, and is now established in over 40 countries. The program provides a practical approach to supporting development through relationships in everyday communication. It uses video review and interactional analysis to show practitioners how to use ordinary interactions to support children's development and to pass these ideas on to parents and other significant carers. It is now also used in many other sectors, eg aged care and adult disability. Marte Meo has demonstrated its value in these sectors in a number of ways including reducing aggression, and improved relationships with the family.

Provider Australian Childhood Foundation

Course: Responding to family violence

ID: 1582

About: Finding the courage to leave a violent relationship and rebuild the life of their family requires mothers and children to meet many complex challenges. The aftermath of family violence can affect the ways in which children and mothers interact. It can affect the confidence of mothers to understand and meet the developmental needs of their children. In the mix, there is the need to understand whether to and/or how to involve the parent who has acted violently. This one day workshop explores all of these elements and supports practitioners to work in a child focused and relationally reparative context with parents and children following experiences of family violence. It is grounded in the extensive work of the Australian Childhood Foundation in the family violence sector where their ongoing focus on supporting children who have experienced violence is long acknowledged and well respected.

Course: Management of Actual or Potential Aggression Foundation program

ID: 1557

About: The MAPA® Foundation programme is modular and can be easily adapted to your particular environment providing four key learning objectives:
Identify behaviour that indicates an escalation toward the aggressive and violent, and take appropriate measures to avoid, decelerate and/or de-escalate crisis situations.
Assess the level of risk associated with crisis behaviour and make appropriate decisions related to the management of such risks.
Use suitable and acceptable physical interventions to reduce or manage risk behaviour.
Identify the impact of crisis events and describe post-crisis responses that can be used for personal and organisational support and learning.
The programme supports potentially vulnerable people or whose staff work with individuals who may exhibit behaviours that can challenge. Fully flexible, the programme can be tailored to your needs. For example, if you do not need physical holds but staff need disengagement skills, then the programme can be delivered in just one day.
